LAST CALL FOR YOUNG PEOPLE TO LEARN AND PARTICIPATE

Young Ipswich people have a unique opportunity to learn about Queensland Parliament with nominations currently open for the 10th YMCA Queensland Youth Parliament until the end of the month, the Member for Ipswich Rachel Nolan said today.

Nominations are open for people aged between 15 and 25 who want to tell politicians what they think, learn to become better public speakers and who generally want to empower themselves.

“Young people have a lot to say and can really make a difference. This is a great way for them to stand up and be heard.

“If successful, the participant will get hands on experience of parliamentary process alongside like-minded young people who want to share their creative thoughts and ideas.

“Ipswich has had some outstanding young people represent their community in the YMCA Queensland Youth Parliament in previous years and I’m sure that this year will be no different,” Ms Nolan said.

Nominations close 5pm Monday 28 February and forms are available from the Ipswich Electorate Office at the Booval Professional Centre, 125 Brisbane Road Booval phone 3202 3452 or you can apply and view details and testimonials of past participants online at www.youthparliament.ymca.org.au.
